I will most likely return to academia via the adjunct professor route. As a global commodities trader, I was able to set up with other trade structured finance specialists a financial vehicle whereby those countries with emerging economies are able to buy commodities from my company without having to setup with them CAD or Letters of credit payment terms. I extend to buyers in these countries terms generally up to 180 days. In the interim I am able to shop around the world to sell that 90 or 180-day receivable to a Bank prior to the note maturity. I have researched the economies of Trinidad and Tobago, Jamaica, Argentina, Uruguay to name a few to see if we can extend those can of credit facilities. These countries would have to meet the strict due diligence and reasonable care quotient that we allocate to each country.
